Talmenta Management Report: October 2026

Nov 4, 2026 · @Jasper van de Kreeke

Overview

October 2026 was Talmenta's strongest month to date. The company appointed its first commercial lead, secured new client terms and entered its first partnership with an AI-for-mathematics company. An existing grant-funded project continued to generate revenue. Talmenta provides talent-based research management to mathematicians, organizing collaborators, structuring projects and keeping research moving.

Highlights

Metric	October 2026
Active client projects	1 ongoing (recurring monthly revenue) + 1 new client
AI-lab partnerships	1 (pilot from December 2026)
Researchers and department leaders contacted	~137 (target: 100)
Prospects stating purchase intent	3
Qualified pipeline	2 projects at leading universities
Funding opportunities opened	3

Commercial progress

- Ongoing project. A grant-funded AI-for-mathematics research project continued under Talmenta's management.
- New client. A professor at a German university accepted terms for a research project in arithmetic geometry. Collaborator recruitment is under way.

- AI-lab partnership. A leading AI-for-mathematics company will provide platform access to researchers on a Talmenta-managed project, from December through March.
- Pipeline. Projects are being scoped with researchers at UC Berkeley and Imperial College London.
- Funding. Talmenta opened discussions with a major AI-for-math fund and an AI-for-math award programme. A leading US mathematics institute invited Talmenta to propose a workshop on verifying AI-assisted mathematics.

Team

Stephanie Covey, a former sales director at Nexstar, joined as Head of Growth and Partnerships. Talmenta is building out research management, project development, marketing and advisory roles. Candidates are selected through talent assessment and structured interviews.

Outlook

In November, Talmenta moves from first wins to scale. Outreach to more than 1,300 senior US mathematicians began on Nov 3. The priorities are converting pipeline into signed clients, securing first grant funding and preparing for seed investment.